Choice Poetry.

THE VOICELESS.

We count the broken lyres that rust,
The silent harps that hang in silence,
But e'er their silent sister's breast
The wild fingers will sleep in number!
A few can touch the magic strings,
And melody is proud to win them;
Alas for those that never sing,
But die with all their music in them!

Nay, give not for the dumb alone
Whose song has told their hearts' sad story—
Weep for the voiceless, who have known
The cross without the crown of glory!
Not where loud music swells the air,
Our faithful memory-haunted pillow,
But where the glistering night-dew weeps
On nameless sorrow's church-yard pillow.

O hearts that break and give no sign
Save whitening lips and falling tresses,
Thou death-pale soul that couldst weep
Shouldst drop from misery's crushing press—
If slumbering beauty or aching heart,
To every hidden pang were given,
What endless melodies were poured,
As sad as death, as sweet as heaven!

CRAVING FOR REPOSE.

"But to be still, oh, but to be still,
The fainting heart and weary eyes of life,
The jangling, the hums, the droning, and the strife,
Of hourly being, the sharp blinding glare
Of action fretting on the tightened chain
Of rough excitement! all that is not pain,
But utter weariness! oh! to be free,
But for a while, from conscious agony!
To shut the hearing doors and windows wide
Of restless sense, and let the soul abide,
Darkly and still, for a little space,
Gathering its strength up to pursue the race;
Oh, heaven! to rest a moment, but to rest,
From this quick, galling life, were to be bliss!"

"Some there are whose names will live
Not in the memories, but in the hearts of men,
Because their hearts they combated and raised;
And where they saw God's images cut down,
Lifted them up again, and laid the dust
From the worn features and deflected limbs."

Miscellaneous.

EDUCATION.

Where does it begin? It is a common saying "we send our children to school to become educated." Education is to draw out the mind. Does the mind of the child lie dormant until it is old enough and sent to school? Is indeed the mind of the child in the hands of the teacher, like plastic clay in the hands of the potter? Nay, ten thousand impressions are made upon that plastic mind, ere the teacher's hand is called to shape it. Among the earliest impressions, are those formed by the look of its mother. Who has not noticed, that an infant will laugh heartily at a cluck and shake of the head from its mother, when, if a stranger does the same thing, it will look quite sober if it does not even cry.

And how confidently the little one turns to its mother for sympathy, when any little accident happens to it. The true mother is an inexhaustible bundle of sympathies to her group of little ones. Always ready to pour out the balm of consolation whenever called on.

A few days since business called us into a family of which the heads were unusually intelligent.

Little Willie, a lad of three or four summers, was running around and struck his side against the sofa. Of course, mirth was instantly changed into weeping. Children's laughs and cries seem always so near the surface that but a little jestle will spoil either of them, without reference so much to the extent as to the intent of the blow. In this instance, the mother commenced pouring out her oil of consolation in that appropriate manner so peculiar to a mother, when the father interfered, and insisted that he should be left alone and not made such a baby of. That making such a fuss over him for every little hurt, will but make him cry the more for every little trifle. If you do not notice him he will soon get over it, and soon learn not to mind such trifles. But the mother's instinct was stronger than the Philosopher's reasoning. "Willie was surely hurt or he would not cry so."

This small incident set us to thinking. We concluded that, if this world was void of sympathy, it would be so near congelation that the first breath from the arctic region would freeze it harder than Lot's wife. We are but grown-up babies, and love sympathy dearly, and although to let a child get over its mishaps without noticing it, will tend to make a child grow up strong, hardy, self relying and persevering; yet with all, there will abound so strong a proportion of selfishness, as to mar the whole character and life of the individual. Let sympathy be freely given, but not prodigally, and then we may feel within us, growing with our growth, that we live not for ourselves alone. This should always be kept in view in early education.

A young friend of our's, while dressing a very young child, a few days ago, said, in rather an impatient tone, "you are such a queer-shaped lump of a thing it is impossible to make anything fit you!" The lips of the child quivered, and looking up with its eyes filled with tears, it said in a deprecating tone:—"God made me." Our friend was rebuked, and the little "lump" was kissed a dozen times.

"True religion (says Bayard Taylor) is never spasmodic. It is calm as the existence of God. I know of nothing more shocking than such attempts to substitute rockets and blue lights for heaven's eternal sunshine."

Why are ladies like bells? Because you can never find out their metal until you have given them a ring.

A Wife's Influence.

Judge O'Neal, in the Yorkville Enquirer, tells the following of Judge William Smith, of South Carolina:

"He had the rare blessing to win the love of one of the purest, mildest, and best of women, whose character has ever been present to the writer. He married Margaret Duff. In his worst days she never upbraided him by word, look, or gesture, but always met him as if he was one of the kindest and best of husbands. This course on her part humbled him and made him weep like a child. This sentence, it is hoped, will be remembered, was the language of Judge Smith to the friend already named, and to those who knew the stern, unbending public character of the Judge, it will teach a lesson of how much a patient woman's love can accomplish. He was at last reformed by an instance of her patient love and devotion, as he himself told it."

"The evening before the Return Day of the Court of Common Pleas for York district a client called with fifty notes to be put in suit. Mr. Smith was not in his office—he was on what is now fashionably called a spree, then a frolic. Mrs. Smith received the notes and sat down in the office to the work of issuing the writs and processes. She spent the night at work—Mr. Smith in riotous living. At daylight, on his way home from his carousals, he saw a light in his office, and stepped in, and to his great surprise saw his amiable wife, who had just completed what ought to have been his work, with his head on the table and asleep. His entry awoke her. She told him what she had done, and showed him her night's work—fifty writs and processes. This bowed the strong man; he fell on his knees, implored her pardon, and then and there faithfully promised her never to drink another drop while he lived. 'This promise,' says my friend, Col. Williams, 'he faithfully kept,' and said the judge to him, 'from that day every thing which I touched turned to gold.' 'His entire success in life,' says Col. Williams, 'he set down to his faithful observance of this noble promise.'"

"No better eulogy could be pronounced on Mrs. Smith than has just been given in the words of her distinguished husband.—The reformation of such a man as William Smith is a chapter of glory which few women have been permitted to wear. To the people of South Carolina, and especially of York district, certainly no stronger argument in favor of temperance, total abstinence, need be given."

AN INSTRUCTIVE INCIDENT.—A few days since, says a contemporary of a neighboring town, a little boy of two summers was seen standing in the middle of the road, and bestowing a very low bow upon a great sober faced cow, while he lisped forth, in sweetest infantile accents, "Thank you, pretty mooley cow, for making pleasant milk for me." It seemed that the little fellow had a song-book at home, wherein a verse ran:

"Thank you pretty cow, who made Pleasant milk to suck my bread."

And the little to seek to his mind at the moment, he made it a point to stop and thank Mistress 'Mooley' on the spot. Was not the sweet child, as he stood basking in the bright sunlight, and bearing the impress of God's fashioning hand so plainly visible upon the dawning mind which looked forth from those bright blue eyes, reading an instructive lesson to 'children of a larger growth,' who receive all life's common blessings so unregardedly?

Be Pleasant.

Do be pleasant—oh why can't you? Will you feel any better for snapping, snarling or growling? You know you won't. If your heart was really a dirty dish, and ugly emotion and cross words were the uncleanness, it would be a good plan to get them all out as fast as possible; but unfortunately, there can be no such sudden exorcism of a man's interior. The more objectionable stuff he throws out the more there grows to replace it—'tis only smothering and choking that suits his case. Speak pleasantly, then, especially to people in any respect beneath you—whether they be inferior to you in rank, learning, power or age; try to be pleasant towards them, whether you really feel good natured or not. If you get your mouth open to throw out a spike or a dagger still it till you, like the juggler, transform the weapon into a flower. Oh, do be kind and pleasant to everybody, and the millennium will come at once.

A trifling sort of fellow is one of our adjoining counties, not long since, won the affections of the daughter of a bluff and honest Dutchman of some wealth.—On asking the old man for her, he opened with a romantic speech about his being a poor young man, &c. "Yo, ya," said the old man, "I know all about it; but you is a little too boor—you has neider money or character."

An advocate of total abstinence was once urging a confirmed toper to forego his favorite Monongahela, and to substitute water in its stead, declaring the claims water possessed over all other fluids as a beverage.

"I know," said Tipsey, "water is a fine thing, but then it is so blamed thin!"

The latest style of female hoops is guaranteed "to be of feminine lightness and delicacy, and warranted not to cut the limbs of attendant gentlemen."

A teetotaler, the other day, asked a neighbor if he was not inclined to the temperance society, and he replied, "Yes; for when he saw liquor, his mouth watered!"

The Whistling Hoosier.

Some years ago, a tall, gaunt, knock-kneed, rail-headed, cross-eyed Hoosier, who was a hunter of the classical Wabash, conceived the idea of making a visit to the home of his progeniture in old Kaintuck. He did so—ranted round amongst the girls some, and was, of course, from his native impudence and unearthly ugliness, the "observed of all observers."

One morning the whole neighborhood was astonished with the news that the ugly Hoosier had eloped with Mrs. B., an amiable, good looking woman, wife of Mr. B., and mother of half a dozen little B's.—For two long years the disconsolate husband mourned over his untoward bereavement; at the end of that period, however, in his utter astonishment, he popped Mrs. B. looking as bright and rosy as ever.—After the first greeting was over the injured B. thus addressed his traitor spouse:

"Nancy, how could you take up with that thar coonlith ugly Hoosier, and leave me and the children all forlorn, as you did?"

"Well, Josh," said Nancy, "that thar ugly critter from Indarany was a leetle the best whistler I ever horn tell on. You know I was always fond of good whistling—I used to think you could whistle some, but I never heard whistling as is whistling, until I heard him. He whistled my senses clean away, and I fellered him off on that account. A short time ago, however, he caught the measles, and they split his whistling forever—the charm was broken, and so I concluded to come back to you; but O Josh! that Hoosier was the awfullest whistler that ever pucker'd!"

He Voted for Mr. Buchanan.

Mr. Elihu Showalter, proprietor of the "Buchanan House," in this place, and who is not only a clever gentleman, but a genuine wit, and a good democrat, tells the following:—A few days ago a native of the Emerald Isle, perhaps from Mayo, staggered into his bar-room quite tight, a sick on his shoulder, and a dirty-looking bundle suspended therefrom. Soon as he entered the room he threw down his bundle, and exclaimed, "At home again, be jabbers." The landlord pretended not to notice the visitor, whereupon Dennis—for that was his name—swaying himself as well as he was able on the floor, said, "come let us have something to drink." This modest request Mr. Showalter declined, adding that Dennis was drunk enough already.—To this the Irishman responded: "Arrah, be jabbers! Mr. Buchanan, I voted for you last presidential election; won't you give us a small drop of the creature?"—Fairmont Virginian.

Jim H., out west, tells a good yarn about a "shell bark lawyer." His client was upon two small charges, "frivolous charges," as shell bark designated them, (forging a note of hand and stealing a horse.) On running his eye over the jury he didn't like their looks, so he prepared an affidavit for continuance, setting forth the absence in Alabama of a principal witness. He read it in a whisper to the prisoner, who shaking his head, said:

"Squire, I can't swear to that ar doky-mint."

"Why?"

"Case hit haint true."

Old shell inflated and exploded loud enough to be heard throughout the room.

"What! forge a note, an' steal a horse, an' can't swear to a lie! Hang such infernal fools."

And he left the conscientious one to his fate.

Refined, Very.

—One of our exchanges says a beautiful damsel being asked to wait by a gentleman at a ball in one of the large towns in New England, replied, "No, I thank you, I don't like to wait it makes me puke."

In Kentucky a Plowman became enamored of a milk-maid on a neighboring farm. His addresses were rejected, and the disappointed swain, full of melancholy and revenge, procured a rope, went to the barn, and—tied all the cow's tails together!

The Way to Treat Injuries.

—If a bee stings you, will you go to the hive and destroy it? Would not a thousand come upon you? If you receive a trifling injury do not go about the streets proclaiming it and be anxious to avenge it. Let it drop. It is wisdom to say little respecting the injuries you may have received.

Those people who turn up their noses at the world might do well to reflect that it is as good a world as they are ever in, and a much better one than they are likely ever to get into again.

A driver of a coach in Texas, stopping to get some water for the young ladies in the carriage, being asked what he stopped for, replied, "I am watering my flowers." A delicate compliment.

Two Ways of Correcting a Fault.

"Well, Sarah, I declare! you are the worst girl that I know of in the whole country!"

"Why, mother! what have I done?"

"See there! how you have spilled water in my pantry! Get out of my sight; I cannot bear to look upon you—you careless girl!"

"Well, mother! I couldn't help it."

Mrs. A., the mother, is a very worthy woman, but very ignorant of the art of family government. Sarah, her daughter, is a headless girl of about ten years old. She is very much accustomed to remove things out of proper places, and seldom stops to put them in again. On the occasion referred to above, she had been sent to put water into the tea-kettle, and had very carelessly spilled a considerable portion on the pantry floor. After the above conversation, which, on the part of the mother, sounded almost like successive claps of thunder on the ears of her daughter, Sarah escaped, in a pouting manner, into an adjoining room, and her mother wiped up the slop in the pantry.

Well, thought I, my dear Mrs. A., if that is the way you treat your daughter, you will probably find it necessary to wipe after her a great many times more, if you both live. Such family government as hers set forth, seems to me to be liable to serious objections.

The reproach was too boisterous. Children can never be frightened into a knowledge of error, or into conviction of crime. It is their judgment, and their taste for neatness and order, which need training, and not their fears.

It was too unreasonable. The child was, indeed, careless; but she had done nothing to merit the title of the "worst girl in the country." Children are sensible of injustice, and very soon find it difficult to respect those who unjustly treat them.

It was too passionate. The mother seemed to be boiling over with displeasure and disgust; and under this excitement, she despised her darling child; the very same that, in a short time afterward, when the storm had blown by, she was ready to embrace in her arms as almost the very image of perfection.

It was inefficient. Sarah retired, under the idea that her mother was excited for a very little thing, which she could not help. Thus she blamed her mother and acquitted herself.

Mrs. B. is another mother in the same neighborhood. Mrs. A. wonders why Mrs. B. has such very good children. Says Mrs. A., "I talk a great deal more to my children than Mrs. B. does. I frequently scold them most severely, and I sometimes whip them, until I think they will never disobey me again! And yet, how noisy, careless and disobedient my children are! Mrs. B. says but little to her children, and yet her family moves like clock work. Order, neatness and harmony abound, and I never heard of her whipping them at all."

"Tis even so! And I should like to tell Mrs. A. the great cause of her failure. She has not yet learned to govern herself, and it is not, therefore, surprising that her family is poorly governed.

Mrs. B. has a daughter, Catharine, about the same age with the daughter of Mrs. A. Not long since Catharine committed, in a hurry, the same act of carelessness as above related, and Mrs. B.'s treatment of it reveals her secret of family government.

"Catharine, my daughter, can you tell me how this water came on the floor?"

"I suppose, mother, I must have spilled it a few moments ago, when I filled the tea-kettle."

"Why did you not wipe it up, my daughter?"

"I intended to return and do so; but getting engaged on something else, I forgot it."

"Well, my daughter, when you do wrong, you should try to repair it to the best of your ability, and as soon as possible. Get the mop and wipe it up, and try not to do so again."

Catharine immediately does as she is bid, remarking:

"I will try to be more careful another time."

Mrs. A. may be found in almost every community. Mrs. B., though, perhaps a more rare personage, yet graces many families in our land.—British Mother's Journal.

A Novel Suit.

At the Supreme Judicial Court at Machias, Me., the following novel case came up for trial:

No. 255.—Hiram P. Osgood vs Joseph Crandon. This action was brought to recover sixteen dollars subscribed by defendant towards paying for plaintiff's services as preacher of the Gospel. In the testimony it appeared that the money was not to be paid if the plaintiff "preached politics," which the defendant thought he did, and consequently withheld payment. The jury failed to agree, after being out five hours.

How to Stop a Paper.

—An editor who has probably suffered some, tells people how to stop a paper. He says:

"Call at the office and fork up arrearages and order it to be stopped like a man, and not refuse to take it out of the post office, and sneak away like a puppy."

A letter was dropped into the Post Office in Greenfield, Mass., last week, directed to "Eggborough Nuchersy." After some study, it was sent to Egg Harbor city, N. J.

Deacon John Bolles.

The following is a good illustration of sectarian bigotry, as well as a characteristic incident in the life of Deacon Bolles, who was an eminent type of the age in which he lived, for personal and private worth, both as a man and a Christian:

When the Baptists of Hartford began to hold public services, an over zealous member of Dr. Strong's society called upon him and asked him if he knew that John Bolles had started an opposition meeting.

"No," said he, "when, where?"

"Oh, yes, I know it," the doctor carelessly replied; "but it is not an opposition meeting. They are Baptists, to be sure, but they preach the same doctrine that I do. You had better go and hear them."

"Go," said the man, "I am a Presbyter."

"So am I," rejoined Dr. Strong, "but that need not prevent us from wishing them well. You had better go."

"No," said the man with energy, "I shan't go near them. Dr. Strong, ain't you going to do something about it?"

"What?"

"Stop it, can't you?"

"My friend," said the doctor seriously, "John Bolles is a good man, and will surely go to heaven. If you and I got there, we shall meet him, and we had better, therefore, cultivate a pleasant acquaintance with him here."

Breaking into a State Prison.

Jane Wade, a girl about 20 years of age, was sentenced to four years' imprisonment in the Connecticut State Prison, by the Court in New London county, for stealing a horse. Her time of imprisonment expired last October, when she was employed by a family in Wethersfield to do housework. In March last the family finding that she was accustomed to stealing, turned her away. Frequently, since then, they missed articles about the house, and found evidences that some person had been about the premises. They finally discovered Miss Wade in the house, and she acknowledged that she had been there frequently and slept in the ash-hole at night.

But her strangest adventure was breaking into the State Prison! One night last week she scaled the stone wall that encloses the prison by climbing a tree. The wall was about twenty feet high. From the yard she crawled into the kitchen, which is separated from the male prisoners, and is not guarded at night, through an outlet for the ashes, which connects with the yard. She slept in this ash-hole for six nights, and when found had six empty mush or pudding pans by her side, which she had taken from the kitchen when fall. On Sunday night last, she snored so loud in her ash-hole bed as to attract the attention of the matron, and after a search she was found and dragged out. The opinion of an eminent lawyer was given that Miss Wade may be indicted and convicted of burglary—she having broken into the State Prison in the night season, and stolen six pans full of meal pudding! There is not a parallel case on record.—Hartford Times.

DEATH AND BURIAL OF AN AGED CITIZEN.

—Eccentricities.—Mr. Bennett Aldridge, one of the oldest citizens of Petersburg, being eighty-one years of age, died at his residence, on Halifax street, last Friday. He had some time since prepared for the event by having his grave dug, and prepared a heavy tomb ready. The grave was dug, and lined to the top with granite, the old man having the singular fancy that the devil couldn't scratch through such solid walls. Among other eccentricities, he left among his last injunctions a request that the funeral sermon and services over him should be performed by Mr. John McIntire, a well known mechanic. Mr. M. promised, and we understand, performed the service, explaining the occasion of his strange situation.—Petersburg Va. Press.

A Man Tries to Chop his own Head off.

—A correspondent of the Vevay (Ind.) Reveille, writing from Carroll county, Ky., states that a few days since a party of men were raising a log building. One of the company, a young man known as Thomas E. Searsey, suddenly left his work, seized an axe, and cut several severe gashes on the top of his head. On an attempt being made to wrest the weapon from him, he brandished it in the air, threatening to kill any one who approached him. He then laid his head upon a log, and was about to chop his own head off, when his companions managed, after a desperate struggle, to secure him. Searsey is described as being an intelligent, upright man, and had never before given evidence of being insane.

Philadelphia City.

—The North American of Philadelphia claims that the population of that city now numbers 608,927.—This includes the whole county of Philadelphia, which is very extensive and contains a number of populous villages. Kensington, Southwark, Moyamensing, the Northern Liberties, Manayunk, Germantown, Frankford, Holmesburg, Bustleton, Hamilton, Mantua, &c., are all now counted in a census of Philadelphia. The whole area thus included is about 155 square miles.

RUSSIA.

EXTRAORDINARY CHARGE OF FRAUD BY AMERICANS.

The London News, of the 16th, contains a letter from St. Petersburg, which makes the following remarkable disclosure:

"The result of the calculations lately made by the well known Astronomer, Professor Struve, of the University of Dorpat, relative to the true geographical positions of St. Petersburg and Moscow, and the distance between the two capitals of the empire is, that the actual length of the railroad is, by astronomical observations, no less than 88½ miles (about 60 miles) shorter than its nominal length of 607 wersts, or in other words, that the government, for whose account the railroad was constructed, has had to pay about one-seventh of the value, or twelve millions of roubles more than it ought to have paid."

"As the rolling stock of the St. Petersburg and Moscow Railway is furnished by an American company, who are paid for the same at so much per werst, it follows that in this quarter the government have been paying, also, a most fearful overcharge."

The poles erected along the line to denote the distance, have been systematically fixed in the wrong places, so as to mislead both the government and the public.

"The Emperor was in the most violent state of excitement on learning the above, and gave immediate orders for the strictest investigation into the facts of the case to be made, with the view to inflict the most summary punishment on the parties implicated in this nefarious transaction; but as so many persons of the highest rank and importance are compromised in the affair, it is not likely that the investigation will be continued, but on the contrary the matter will be hushed up to prevent the public scandal of the real delinquents being exposed and made to suffer the penalty they so richly deserve, for the share they have taken in this atrocious fraud."

An Extraordinary Bank Failure.

The failure of the Western Bank of Glasgow, Scotland, has spread unparalleled ruin throughout that city. Thirteen hundred families held investments in the concern, which, in many cases, constituted the sole dependence of aged professional men, widows and orphan daughters. The total paid up capital was equal to $7,500,000. When the stoppage occurred it was soon seen that the whole of that property was swept away, and that those who had nothing else would be reduced to destitution. It was hoped, however, that this would be the worst. In a little further time it transpired that there would be a deficiency of $1,500,000, in addition to the loss of the whole capital. A call of $125 per share was accordingly enforced on all who had anything left. This was finally paid in June last. A full then intervened, and it was supposed that if there should happen to be any further call, it would be light. Complete astonishment was therefore felt on the 7th inst., when it was announced that the deficiency, instead of being $1,500,000, had proven to be $7,000,000, and that upon each share a fresh payment of $500 would be required within 24 days.

A large proportion of the stockholders having been already ruined, the number of those able to respond is limited, and it is calculated that out of the thirteen hundred not more than one hundred and fifty will ultimately have any property left. Many of the sufferers have died, some have become insane, children have been thrown on the charity of friends and strangers, and there is scarcely a family in the district which is not to some extent afflicted. One eminent retired merchant who had invested the whole of a large fortune in the concern has died of a broken heart.

A Family Burned to Death.

From the Grand Rapids (Mich.) Enquirer of Oct. 28.

One of the most appalling calamities that ever occurred in Kent county transpired on Tuesday night. A dwelling house and its contents, including a man, his wife and 6 children, were totally destroyed by fire, without any living person knowing anything of the matter until the next morning, when the house had disappeared. The facts of the case are as follows:

Hiram Robinson recently exchanged a farm in Georgetown, Ottawa county, for a farm in Gaines, eight miles from this city, on the Kalamazoo plank-road. Monday and Tuesday Robinson was engaged in removing his family and goods. The neighbors saw nothing of him after night-fall.

It is supposed that he and his wife retired early, on account of the very fatiguing labors of the day. From the evening of Tuesday to the morning of Wednesday, everything remains an impenetrable mystery. Probably the building caught fire from the stove pipe, and as the tenement was of boards it was soon in a blaze.

Owing to fatigue, Mr. Robinson and his family were probably not awakened until too late to escape. That they attempted to escape, is shown from the fact that the bodies of both man and wife were found lying partially beyond the door-sill of the house, and the youngest child, an infant, outside the location of the house.

It is believed that when they ascertained their danger they rushed to the door and forced it open, but that, in so doing, some of the upper heavy burning timbers fell upon and cast the pair to the ground, covering the entire family with a horrible inextinguishable bath of fire, and soon destroying life.

Temptations are a self, which rubs off much of the dust of self-confidence.

Important from Oregon—Indians Subdued.
HARTFORD, Oct. 29.—A letter received from Lt. Taylor of the army in Oregon, addressed to his father, dated September 15th, states that the Spokan and Palouse Indians were defeated after two days fighting, and spoken, the chief, and nine hundred horses were captured, and all the plunder taken by the Indians from Col. Steptoe recaptured. Col. Steptoe's pistol was found on the body of a dead Indian. The army lost not a man! The Indians, he says, are begging for peace and complying with all demands, so that the war is considered as ended. This letter was expressed to Fort Taylor by Indian runners, and is probably the only intelligence from the seat of war by the last California steamer.

A Cruel Fraud.—During a recent week 1314 emigrants were landed at Castle Garden. This makes a total for the year of 65,530. At the last meeting of the Commissioners it was announced that forged notes, purporting to be on American banks, are frequently passed off on unsuspecting emigrants, in exchange for foreign currency. These counterfeiters are got up in New York, and sent to Europe for this fraudulent purpose. Specimens of these notes were produced, and the names of the swindlers signified. They should be published throughout the length and breadth of the land. It appears almost impossible to prevent emigrants from the tricks and devices of the base and the mercenary. All sorts of expedients are resorted to with the object of plundering them. The Commissioners of Emigration have exerted themselves to the utmost, but the rogues have thus far been too much for them.

Sealing a Coffin.—Two men have been arrested in Wolverhampton, England, for sealing a coffin. The coffin was of copper and worth $300. The thieves took out the body, and left it in the tomb and sold the coffin for old copper.

Second Crop of Apples and Green Peas.—The Frederick (Md.) Citizen recently noticed the second blooming of an apple orchard on the premises of Mr. John Hagen, of the Mountain House, and says that some of the second crop of apples are nearly as large as partridge eggs. The trees appear to be very full. The Norfolk Herald states for several days past green peas have been quite plentiful in market in that city at 50 cents a peck.

Down East Girls.—The Machinists (Me.) Union tells us that Mr. Joseph Conley, of Cutler, while bound for Seal Island, one day recently, in an open boat, was struck by a squall, and the boat swamped and sunk, leaving him in a dangerous condition. Two girls, daughters of Mr. John McGuire, went to his rescue, having to row the boat they were in more than a mile! They succeeded in bringing Mr. Conley ashore, except a thorough drenching.

The Telegraph Marriage between Jonathan and Miss Great Britain, which was so brilliantly celebrated a few weeks ago, is evidently a very unhappy one. At all events, no words have passed between them since the bridal day.

GREAT IMPROVEMENT IN COOKING STOVES.

Consumption of Smoke and Gas, and Saving of Fuel.

THE subscriber would respectfully inform the public that he has added to his former variety of Stoves, a new Patent Gas-burning COOKING STOVE. It is well known that all inflammable matter requires a certain amount of air to support combustion, and if the supply is insufficient, it is impossible to produce a flame. The heat of the fire, in ordinary cooking stoves, decomposes the fuel, and as all the fresh air is admitted under the grate, the oxygen is exhausted before it has passed through the fire-chamber. The close flues at the top of the stove then act as an extinguisher, tending to put out the fire instead of assisting the combustion. A large portion of the fuel, therefore, passes off in the shape of smoke, clogging up the flues of the stove so as to impede the draft and interfere with the baking, or of the invisible gas which combines with the lime and so destroys the mortar of the chimneys, loosening the bricks, and exposing the dwellings to the danger of fire.

The introduction of an additional supply of cold air, would cool the gas below the igniting temperature, but by the proper application above the fire, of air previously heated to a temperature for several hundred degrees (which is one of the prominent features of the patent,) the gases are inflamed in numerous jets, and their combination is sufficient to heat the oven, even if the draft through the fire-chamber is entirely closed.

In addition to the ordinary direct draft under the grate and through the fire-chamber, the gas-burner has an additional draft through the top plates, which is of itself sufficient to maintain combustion. The upper draft not only consumes the gases, but it helps to strengthen and preserve the centre pieces, which are most exposed to the direct action of the fire, and which are made double instead of the usual single plates. By means of this draft only, all the operations of cooking can be carried on when the fuel is but partially ignited, and the fuel consequently burns more slowly and more economically.

A sufficient evidence of the effect of the gases in heating the oven, is found in the fact that the oven will be ready for baking, even before the fire is thoroughly kindled, and much sooner than in any other stove. As gas burning Stoves are the order of the day, the Gas-burning Cooking Stove will not only be the leading stove of the present season, but it will undoubtedly supersede all others. Purchasers will, therefore, consult their own interests, by seeing and examining it before giving orders elsewhere. The operation is so perfect, and its advantages are so easily to be seen and understood, that it readily commands at retail, an advance of five or six dollars over the retail price of any stove of the same size.

Also, on hand a variety of PARLOR COAL STOVES—cheap. ANDREW POLLEY, York St., Gettysburg. Sept. 27.

A Card from Dr. James M. Jarrett, of the New-York Lung Infirmary.

My connection for the past eight years with the above Institution, as Chief Physician, and a twelve years' course of steady devotion to the Cure of Pulmonary Consumption and its kindred diseases, together with my unrivaled opportunities and advantage of pathological research—aided not a little by a perfect system of Medical Inhalation—has enabled me to arrive at a decisive, direct, and successful course of treatment for the positive and radical cure of all diseases of the Throat, Lungs, and Air-Passages. By Inhalation, the vapor and curative properties of various medicines are directly addressed to the diseased organs and the integument. I do not advise the use of Medical Inhalation of any kind, to the exclusion of general treatment; and although I consider it a useful adjunct in the proper management of those fearful and often fatal diseases, yet I deem it very necessary that each patient should have the benefit of both general and local treatment. The success of my treatment in the above diseases, and the high character of the Institution over which I have so long had the honor to preside, are too well known to need any eulogy or comment from me. At the solicitation of many private and persona friends, through whose philanthropic aid the above charity has been long and liberally supported, and after due consideration, I have concluded to make such arrangements as will bring the benefits of the reach of all, and not confine myself, as heretofore, to those only who entered the Infirmary, or who were able to visit me at my office. Hoping therefore that the arrangement will give entire satisfaction both to my professional brethren and the public, I would respectfully announce in conclusion, that I can now be consulted personally or by letter, on all diseases as above, and that the medicines, the same as used in the Institution, prepared to suit each individual case, including Vapors, Medical Inhalers, &c., &c., will be forwarded by express to any part of the United States or the Canadian Territories. My terms of treatment by letter are as follows, viz: $12 per month for each patient, which will include medicine sufficient for one month's use; also, Inhaler, Vapor, and an Inhaling Apparatus. Payment as follows: $6 to be paid to Express Agent on receipt of the box of Medicine, and the balance $6 at the expiration of the month, if the patient be cured or is entirely satisfied with the treatment. Patients, by giving a full history of their case, and their symptoms in full, can be treated as well by letter as by personal examination. Patients availing themselves of Dr. Jarrett's treatment may rely upon immediate relief, as he seldom has to treat a case over thirty days. Letters for advice promptly answered. For further particulars address

JAMES M. JARRETT, M.D., No. 820 Broadway, cor. Twelfth St., N. Y. P. S.—Physicians and others visiting the city are respectfully invited to call at the Infirmary, where many interesting cases can be witnessed, and where one improved apparatus for the inhalation of medical vapor can be seen and inspected.
